2. Source IPs: All testing activity will come from NCC Group Labs with the IP addresses: <redacted>.

If these addresses change at any time you will be informed.

Any activity seen from other IP addresses during the dates above is NOT authorised NCC Group activity.

3. Third party permissions: If a third-party hosts any of the systems or applications in scope third party permission may be required prior to commencing work. It is your responsibility to obtain any required permission(s). NCC Group recommends obtaining any permissions promptly to avoid delays or cancellations and any additional information (if needed) can be provided by NCC Group on request.

Microsoft no longer requires pre-approval to conduct a penetration test against Azure resources. This process is only related to Microsoft Azure, and not applicable to any other Microsoft Cloud Service. For further information see <https://docs.microsoft.com/en-us/azure/security/fundamentals/pen-testing>

Amazon AWS no longer requires pre-approval to conduct a penetration test against eight services listed within 'Permitted Services'. Testing services which are not listed within the permitted services require a simulated events form to be completed and sent to AWS. AWS aims to send a response within 2 business days. Further information about the process is available at: <https://aws.amazon.com/security/penetration-testing/>

Google GCP If GCP customers plan to evaluate the security of their Cloud Platform infrastructure with penetration testing they are not required to contact Google. Further information about the process is available at: <https://support.google.com/cloud/answer/6262505?hl=en>

Please be aware that cancellation charges may apply if you need to cancel, reschedule, or postpone this testing at short notice. Please refer to the Statement of Work for additional detail.
